Recognizing ADHD Symptoms in Children and Adults

Although ADHD is most common in male children, ADHD affects boys and girls, children and adults. How ADHD presents itself across these different groups of people varies, but there are three main categories of symptoms: hyperactivity, inattention and impulsivity.

If you or your child has ADHD, there are many things you can do in addition to the medications and therapies recommended by your doctor to help make life easier.

Read on to learn about common symptoms of ADHD and what you can do to lessen their impact on your life.

ADHD is one of the most common childhood disorders.

In the United States nearly 6 MILLION CHILDREN
aged three to seventeen have been diagnosed with ADHD

THE MAIN SYMPTOMS IN CHILDREN

HYPERACTIVITY
The child may have trouble doing quiet activities and may talk, squirm and fidget, be constantly on the go, leave his or her seat, or have trouble playing quietly.

INATTENTION
The child may be easily distracted, forgetful, have difficulty listening and following instructions, often daydream and lose his or her things.

IMPULSIVITY
The child may be impulsive and have trouble waiting for his or her turn, often blurt out answers, make inappropriate comments and act without thinking, and may be disruptive.

ADHD children may be primarily hyperactive, primarily inattentive, or combined hyperactive-inattentive.
Most children have combined ADHD.¹

13.5%
of teenagers are diagnosed with ADHD

5.4%
of girls aged 3 to 17
are diagnosed with ADHD

But ADHD doesn't just affect children.

It is now thought that up to 60%
of children with ADHD continue to have symptoms into ADULTHOOD²

In most people the hyperactive and inattentive behaviors fade away with age but the impulsivity and lack of planning remain. These symptoms lead many adults with ADHD to trouble.

LIFESTYLE CHANGES

If you or your child have ADHD there are things you can do in addition to the medications and therapies recommended by your doctor to make everyday life easier.

FOR CHILDREN ¹	FOR ADULTS ²
DIET Make sure your child is eating healthy, diet with lots of fruits and vegetables, and a limited amount of sugar. SCHEDULE Keep a schedule for all tasks, meals and bedtime and try to stick to the changes to the schedule. PLAN Try to avoid situations that will be difficult for your child, such as when he is making driving plans and getting lost in long lines or situations where surroundings may be overwhelming. INSTRUCT Give your child specific, clear instructions one at a time while making eye contact, and when possible demonstrate what you want done. RECHARGE Take a break every now and then. Spending time with ADHD friends and when you burn out you won't be able to give your child the care and attention he or she needs.	NUTRITION Eat a balanced diet with plenty of fruits and vegetables and limit your sugar and caffeine intake. RELAXATION Take up yoga or meditation, which can help you to reduce stress and the tension. ORGANIZE Keep a calendar with all appointments and meetings you need to go to, and make sure you have it with you. REMIND Make lists for what you need to achieve each day, and have a reminder system for yourself. ROUTINE Follow a consistent routine. October is ADHD Awareness Month. Share this with your friends and family and help spread the word that ADHD is a real, medical disorder that affects children and adults alike.
